

JOSEPH ACCURSO

Joe Accurso is not afraid of commitment. The 34-year-old Principal with real estate powerhouse Kessinger/Hunter says he approaches life—both personal and professional—with the intention of building long-term relationships.

It's an approach that seems to be working for Accurso, who was only 33 when Kessinger/Hunter made him a partner in the company, where his portfolio includes more than $75 million in commercial real estate transactions. His work has twice earned him a spot on commercial real estate information company CoStar Group's list of the Top 20 Brokers in Kansas City. "I happen to have a day job that I love," Accurso says.

But Accurso is not just committed to Kansas City real estate; he's committed to the city itself. A lifelong Kansas City resident, Accurso believes in supporting his city, and he's actively involved in the local chapter of the Society of Industrial and Office Realtors, where he served as Communication Chair and Chairman for last year's SIOR Development Day. Accurso also makes time to support Boys Hope Girls Hope, the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society and Rockhurst University, where he's an alumnus of the Business Administration program.
